

sparing diuretics have more frequent ventricular arrhythmias. Even more ominous is the finding in a recent prospective study that 66% of patients in cardiac arrest had magnesium abnormalities and none of these patients were successfully resuscitated (Fazekas et al., 1993; Brugada, 2000; Ho, 2008).