

The closer its value to 100% the better the model fit. It is also used to measure linearity or strength of dose response relationship in validation of experiments.