

What's Cool: The feature that has gotten the most attention on Dunstan's blog is the panorama that is displayed at the top of every page. This image is a real-time reflection of the weather and time of day in Dorset. The view is from the top of Dunstan's parents' house. There are more than 90 different versions of the panorama to reflect all possible weather conditions, times of day, and phases of the moon. Dunstan has even gone so far as to make the sheep behave appropriately for the current conditions — they huddle together at night and spread out during the day. Weather information is obtained from weather.com.

Plans for the future: Dunstan's blog is doing well, and beyond the occasional tweak he doesn't have big plans to change it. He has begun to post more photos and is thinking about trying to integrate his photography portfolio (currently at www.1976design.com/photo/) into the blog.

The screenshot shows a blog page with a panoramic header image of a night sky with a moon and a house. Below the header, the main content area displays "The last seven posts on Dunstan's blog". The first post is titled "Die photos, die!" and is dated "22nd October 2004, late morning | Comments (18)". The text of the post reads: "If you've ever written me an email you'll know that I'm not very good at keeping up to date with my correspondence. My stock defense is that I receive more than my fair share of emails and it usually takes me a while to answer them all, but in truth I'm just rather lazy...". Below the text is a link: "View this post in full (349 words, 1 image)".

The second post is titled "Skim-surfer on Stinson Beach" and is dated "20th October 2004, mid-afternoon | Comments (12)". The text of the post reads: "Photo of a skim-surfer on Stinson Beach, California." Below the text is a link: "View this post in full (No words, 1 image)".

The third post is titled "Hitler who?" and is dated "19th October 2004, mid-afternoon | Comments (45)". The text of the post reads: "On IM: Dunstan: I've just seen something called 'The Nazism Exposed Project' that's, like, old news.. surely?". Below the text is a link: "View this post in full (58 words)".

The fourth post is titled "Anyone out there work for the INS?".

On the right side of the page, there is a sidebar with "Panorama information" and "NAVIGATION" links: Home, Contact, Archive, Reading, Colophon, and Syndicate. Below the navigation is a search bar with the text "Search the blog archiv". At the bottom of the sidebar, it says "SITE POWERED BY" and features the logo for "NAKED DUNSTAN TECHNOLOGIES".